

A gospel artist's journey to musical utopia

Rose Flore François was born in Haiti. She grew up as a minister's daughter in a family of eleven. Her musical exposure came early in life by participating in various activities in the small-town church where her father ministered. Whether it was singing in a wedding, a church program, a special community event, or just within her large family, Rose better known as "Flore" became a hometown favorite by the time she was just 10 years old. At the age of 16, Flore had already won her first singing contest at a live broadcast at local radio station.

Growing up in a musical family help made music come natural as third language for Flore. Her oldest brother's passion for music inspired her to explore deeper into her own musical expression. In the spring of 1997, the tragic death of her brother changed Flore's life forever. It was then that she realized that she could never let go of her dream or the passion for music that Frantz had enabled her to see.

Since arriving in America, Flore has continued to cultivate her gift by sharing the talent instilled in her as a young girl. Influenced by Cece Wynans, Kirk Franklin, Celine Dion and hatian superstar Emeline Michelle. In 2006, Flore released "Show me love" her first album Through Pandera Records which included a French and an English version of a song titled "Just to be with you", "Rien que d'etre avec toi" . Albums are available at Amazon.com, Cdbaby.com.

Today, Flore the singer/song-writer is a wife and proud mother and has been recently appointed as the Worship Leader at her church in Atlanta, Georgia. She has given herself to the Lord Jesus Christ, to whom she has since devoted her life, her voice and talents to the cause of the gospel. She believes that contemporary gospel music is not only a style but a powerful instrument for spreading the message of God's love and comfort to the hearts. We serve Christ by serving others. Despite all, she remains humble and true to God and has only one desire, to serve Him with the talent and the voice he gave her.

In 2010 after the catastrophic Haiti earthquake, the native Haitian has been very busy performing everywhere to help raise funds for Haiti. In Feb. 20, 2010, she had her first Gospel concert to benefit the Haitian survivors in Suwanee, Georgia at the Collin Hill High School Theater where the concert was a major success. By sharing her love for God through music and reaching across all cultural boundaries to express her love for music through songs, Flore hopes to give back something in return for all that's been given to her. Flore is still quite busy today working on her second album. Flore's up and coming single "Never give up" is a message geared toward anyone who is down and out to keep their head up because God has a plan for everyone especially the Earthquake victims of Haiti. Flore's second album will be launched This fall 2010.
